

Yes. Each member of the team is expected to contribute equally to the team's operating expenses, regardless of how many games you are able to attend during the season. It is not fair to expect other players to pay more because your son may not be able to attend all the games scheduled for his team.